

Sundress Publications Seeks Outstanding Non-Featured AWP Panels for Roundtables

Knoxville, TN—Sundress Publications is pleased to announce its second annual AWP Roundtable blog, a celebration of exceptional, not-so-lost panels that did not make the final cut for AWP 2017.

We want to host roundtables on our official blog, sundresspublications.wordpress.com, featuring all the amazing panels that we will sadly not be seeing at AWP. This annual roundtable series was widely viewed in 2016 and included topics such as the MFA experience, publishing without and agent, and the art of cultivating communities of writers. We are eager to feature an array of voices on a variety of topics this year including publishing, craft, community, graduate school, genre, representation, and more.

We know the work it takes to compile an AWP panel proposal, and we push against the idea that those that go unfeatured at the conference should not be granted the opportunity to educate and inspire. We are eager to explore what you have to offer and to give a platform to more writers to share their perspectives, ask critical questions, and engage a substantive audience in productive discussion. We want our blog to serve as an unconventional platform to feature and archive these conversations so that they can reach our international audience.

Bring the topics you were prepared to address with passion back out of your drawer and send that panel submission to us at blog@sundresspublications.com. Use #SundressAWP to follow the conversation on Twitter and Facebook.
